Winner, Best Book 2015
 Bay Area Independent Publishers Association (BAIPA)

“One of those unusual novels where you end up talking about the characters as if you knew them well. Makes for a wonderful read.”

—Bob Schildgen,
 author of Hey Mr. Green

Not Just Another Trashy Mystery

“Fun, incisive trip through the world of recycling, reporting, and male-female relationships.”

—Gael Chandler, author of
Chronicles of Old San Francisco

ELECTION-SEASON SPECIAL

Just in time for the 2016 presidential campaign, Albuquerque to Berkeley, a new ebook for only $99, brings together two John Byrne Barry election-season thrillers—Bones in the Wash and Wasted.

Honesty is the best policy.
 Except in politics, family, love, and murder.

Manteca to Mill Valley

ELECTION SEASON AUTHOR TOUR

“Celebrate” election season with readings and conversation with John Byrne Barry, author of Bones in the Wash, set in New Mexico during the 2008 presidential campaign, and Wasted, a “green noir” mystery set in the Berkeley recycling world against the backdrop of a pivotal city council election.

What ties the books together is the daunting challenge of doing the right thing. Ambitious Albuquerque Mayor Tomas Zamara, protagonist of Bones in the Wash, has a strong sense of integrity, but he knows politics is like playing football on a muddy field. If you don’t get dirty, you’re not giving your all.
